House Republicans Unveil New Border Security Website

House Republicans today unveiled a new website that will serve as a clearinghouse of information on the border security issue. The new site can be found at www.gop.gov/bordersecurity. The site will contain up-to-date information on the efforts and activities of House Republicans, who are working to enact a strong border security bill.

The site includes a listing of the scheduled border security hearings that will be held around the country, and an archive of the Border Security Bulletins. It also includes the principles that House Republicans believe must be contained in any border security package, as well as some key facts about the Reid-Kennedy Senate immigration bill.
